Facebook or Twitter page within six months before the recall. Of these, the manufacturer mentioned the product recall on Facebook in only nine of those cases and on Twitter in eight, the report says.

Many people say they hear of about two to three recalls per year, when there are typically more than 100 recalls on children's products alone each year, Cowles says. In 2013, there were 113 children's products recalled.

"We had heard of different things being recalled from time to time, but not of any place to check and see if there was a database to search," Grasseth said in an e-mail. "We did not realize that her portable crib was recalled until the coroner told us."

Reaching the consumer isn't the only problem.

"Research has shown that consumers need to hear about recalls multiple times before they take action," the CPSC's Wolfson says.
